In a recent lecture, on "The Memorable Events in the History of Richmond" Dr. Hoge, smong other things, spoke of the Capitol disaster, and with his wonderful pathos and power of description photographed upon the minds of his audience a ture of this great calamity. Ever since then many who were very young at the time of the fateful occurrence, or were not then residents of the city, have been asking for fuller particulars.

This is the twentieth anniversary of the accident, and it seems an appropriate day for gratifying the wish thus expressed.

The Dispatch, however, is not unamindful of many whose eves will be dimmed with tears as they scan these columns and recall dear ones whose faces lighted by life went out of view forever in the erambling times and dust and suffocation of that dreadful day.

For twenty years the grass has been growing ever the graves of these dear ones. Twigs then planted by their mounds are trees now, and birds perched on their branches are singing sweet requiems. Babes these fathers left in their wives arms are now men and women; but though two decades are added to the faded past, these beloved dead are still enshrined in the Dispatch, though but discharging its duty, apologetically refers to the day—to the place and to the incidents of that cruel event which plunged a Commonwealth into grief.

On the 18th of March last a new City Council, appointed by Governor Walker in pursuance of the provisions of an act of the General Assembly, known as the "enabling set." elected Mr. H. K. THE FEARTFUL CRASH.

The bells had just tolled the hour of 11,
and death-like silence reigned as Mr.
Starke, the clerk, entered and placed his books on the table. Judges Joynes and Anderson were in their seats. Mr. Starke, leaning over the railing, was talking with them, while the rest of the judges were in the conference-room, not quite prepared to enter on their day's duties. The counsel for Mayor Ellyson, Messrs, Neeson and Meredith, had taken their seats, and were ready to proceed to business. Ex-Governor Wells and L. H. Chandler, Esq., were also in their places and the reporters
of the Engainer, Despuéh, Whig, and State Journal were at the desks set apart for their use and accommodation. The moments were spent in pleasant conversation by the spectators present. Various were the speculations as to the final result;
when, all at once, a panel piece of ceiling
fell, and then the girder gave way
with an awful crash and precipitated the spectators who were in the gallery of the court-room to the main floor, and the additional weight in one single moment's stime crushing the court-room through.
The mass of human beings who were in atdiditional weight in one single moments and diditional weight in one single moments of the mass of human beings who were in at the dance were sent, mingled with the bricks, mortar, splinters, beams, fron bars, desks, and chairs, to the floor of the House of Delegates, and in a second more fifty-seven souls were launched into eternity, seven souls were launched into eternity. Dunham, W. C., agent New York and dense cloud of dust from the plastering, and the human beings sent up a groam which will ring forever in the ears upon which it fell. In a moment, a few survivors clinging to the windows and fragments of hanging timber, and the bare and ten place where only a moment before there was a scene of life, vigor, and hope there was a scene of life, vigor, and hope.

CHANGES AT THE CAPITOL.

When this accident occurred the Supreme-Court room covered all of the floor immediately above the hall of the floor immediately above the hall of the House of Delegates, excepting the rooms which are now the executive offices. The judges' bench was against the east wall. Facing them at the opposite end of the room was a gallery for spectators.

After the disaster the House of Delegates met for awhile in the dining-room of the Ballard House. Then the State of Virginia bought Sycamore church, on Eleventh street between Broad and Marshall. Here the House sat for months. Meanwile the Capitol was repaired and its interior to some extent remodelled. This done the Heuse of Delegates returned to its own hall. The congregation of Sycamore church built the Seventh-Street Christian church; and their old building became the permanent home of the Supreme Court.

That interior pertion of the Capitol building where the Supreme-Court room had been was rebuilt upon a new plan. In the northeast corner Governor Walker had his office; the adjoining room was used as a reception-room; next was the Secretary of the Commonwealth's office, and then you entered the State Library.

Under the administration of Governor Cameron another arrangement of rooms was made and exists to the present day. The Superintendent of Public Printing and the Superintendent of Public Instruction were put in rented rooms outside of the Capitol. Their rooms were then remodelled for the use of Governor Cameron and his secretary. The library was extended on the east up to the northeast corner of the building and the Secretary of the Commonwealth was given an office adjacent to it, in a room which looks out upon the City Hall.

THE TABLET.

Some months after the Capitol disaster Colonel William C. Elam, a well-known journalist of this city, inaugurated a movement looking to raising a fund to secure a memorial tablet to be placed in the hall of the House in honor of those who there perished April 27, 1876. In the course of a year or two a considerable sum of money was secured for this purpose; but it was denosited and lost in a banking institution which collapsed in the great panic of 1873. It is a pity that no such memorial exists. Perhaps the time will come, when released from her financial straits and buoyed up by influx of capital and inmigration, the State of Virginia will devote to this purpose the comparatively small sum of money which will be needed to creek a suitable tablet.

CURED BY CUTICURA.

For three years I was almost crippled with an awful sore leg from my knee down to my antle; the skin was entirely gone and the flesh was one mass of disease. Some physicians pronounced it incurable. It had diminished about one third the size of the other and I was in a hoplose condition. After trying all kinds of remedies and spending hundreds of dollars, from which I got no relind whatever. I was persuaded to try your CUTICURA REMEDIES, and the result was as follows: After three days I noticed a decided change for the better and at the end of two mouths I was completely cured. My dead was purified and the bone (which had been exposed for over a year; got sound. The flesh began to grow and to-day, and for nearly two years past, my leg is as well as ever it was—sound in every respect and not a sign of the disease to be seen.
